PHILOMATH 1972

Framingham, Massachusetts

A long, long time ago, I can still remember How that music used to make me smile.

And I knew if I had my chance, That I could make those people dance And maybe they'd be happy for awhile.

But February made me shiver With every paper I delivered, Bad news on the doorstep, I couldn't take one more step.

I can't remember if I cried When I heard about his widowed bride, But something touched me deep inside The day the music died.

So bye, bye Miss American Pie
Drove my Chevy to the levee
But the levee was dry.
And good ole boys were drinking whiskey and rye,
Singing: This will be the day that I die
This will be the day that I die.

Did you write the book of love? And do you have faith in God above, If the Bible tells you so?

Do you believe in rock and roll? Can music save your mortal soul? And can you teach me how to dance Real slow . . .

I was a lonely teenage bronkin buck, With a pink carnation and a pick-up truck, But I knew that I was out of luck The day the music died . . .

Now for ten years we've been on our own, And moss grows fat on a rollin' stone, But that's not how it used to be . . .

When the jester sang for the king and queen, With a coat he borrowed from James Dean, And a voice that came from you and me.

And while the king was looking down, The jester stole his thorny crown. The courtroom was adjourned, No verdict was returned.

And while men read a book of Marx, The quartet practices in the park, And we sang dirges in the dark, The day the music died . . .

Helter skelter, in a summer swelter, The birds flew off where the fall-out shelter, Eight miles high and falling fast, Landed and fell on the grass, The players tried a forward pass With the jester on the sidelines in a cast.

Now the half-time air was sweet perfume, While Sargeants played a marching tune, We all got up to dance, But we never got the chance.

As the players tried to take the field, The marching band refused to yield. Do you recall what was the feel, The day the music died . . .

In there we were all in one place, A generation lost in space, With no time left to start again.

And as the planes climbed high into the night, To light the sacrificial right, I saw Satan laughing with delight, The day the music died . . .

I met a girl who sang the blues, And I asked her for some happy news, But she just smiled and turned away.

I went down to the sacred store, Where I'd heard the music years before, But the man there said the music wouldn't play.

And in the streets the children screamed, The lover cried, the poets dreamed, But not a word was spoken, The church bells all were broken.

And the three men I admire most: The Father, Son, and the Holy Ghost, They caught the last train for the coast, The day the music died . . .

When the white eagle of the North is flying overhead, The browns, reds, and golds of autumn lie in the gutter dead Remember then, that summer birds with wings of fire flaying, Came to witness springs new hope, born of leaves decaying.

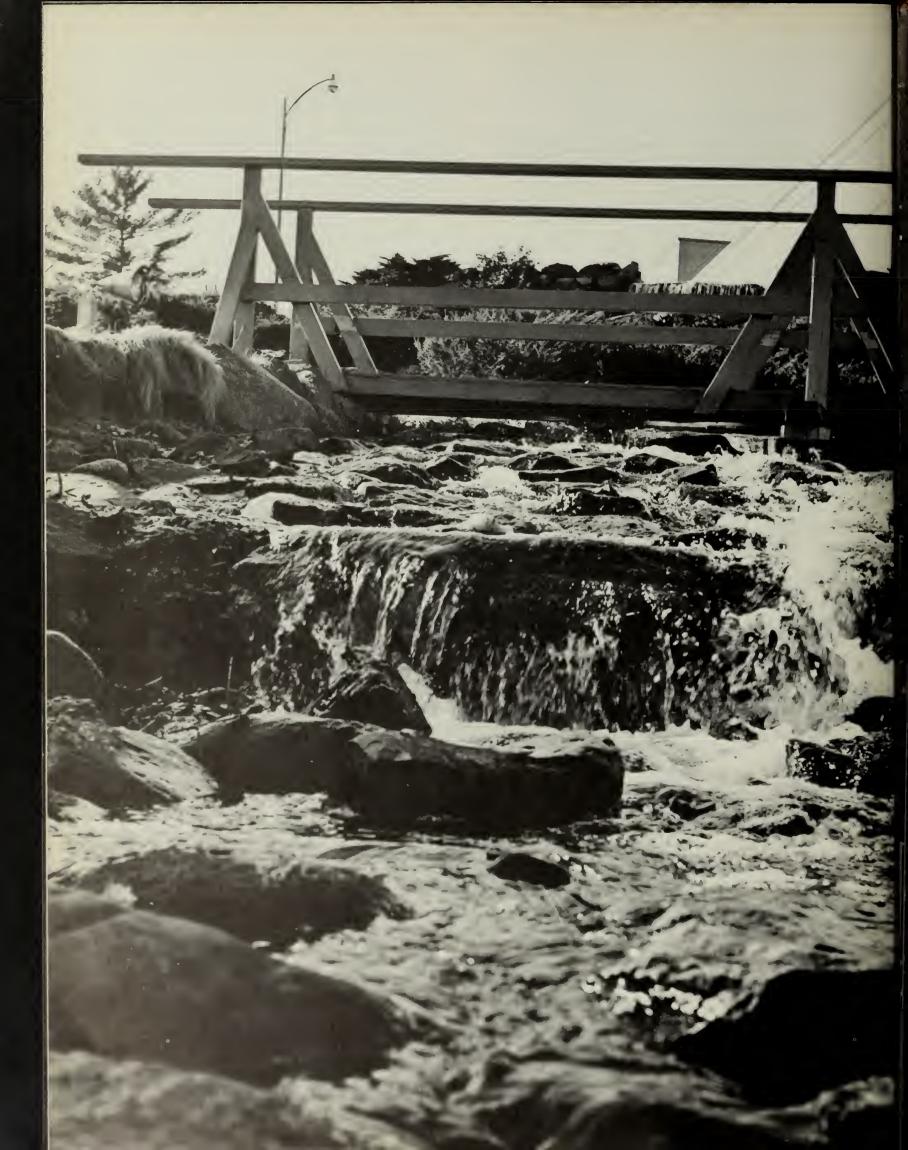

Just as new life will come from death, love will come at leisure.

Love of love, love of life, and giving without measure.

Gives in return a wondrous yearn of a promise almost seen.

Live hand-in-hand and together we'll stand on the threshold of a dream.

We travelled, Always conceiving new ideas, Planning . . . Following Often in the footsteps of those before us.

Until we reached a point
When the path of our predecessors ended.
We came upon a river.
And we pondered what to do.

Maybe it was useless to think, For each of us knew we had no choice But to follow a natural progression And to overcome our obstacle.

We banded together
And through our determination
Built a bridge
That spanned more than water.

Sometimes I feel That I am no good-That I am less than The people who say I'm more. Then the laugh on my face Melts like wax, And I am nothing but a Clown Trying to be heard, And drowning in my own silence. Mimi Wellington Generations, lacking of communication and understanding, can only argue of their ignorance, never realizing they are fighting. and have fought, the same battles.

Too Close

Tomorrow,

Will I be what I am today? I'm afraid I can no longer stay-A child young and free Overnight,

It seems I've changed

Now, I must face reality,

No longer hiding behind my dreams

I have to stand and see

Soon the future will be mine, They say I'm tomorrow's promise It's a terrible responsibility Crossing the divided line which

Separates adults and adolescence

The world is ours-

But do I want it? I can not accept it without change But am I the person to do it? Tomorrow, Tomorrow

Will I be what I am today? I know I can no longer stay A child young and free.

Anne Cushing

Is silence deafening to the deaf? Is darkness blinding to the blind? Find me, for I am lost. Listen to me, for I am mute. Assure me you are there, Someone, Anyone. Jennifer Taylor

The Reason Why Someone tell me, Stillness was present in the little clearing of the forest. The What am I looking for? surrounding trees reached out for one another and their Please, branches were entangled together. The air was soft and cool. She walked slowly across the tiny patch of grass-covered earth. Her hair was brushed back away from her calm but thoughtful face. The white dress she wore clung to her lovely shape. There was an air of serenity about her. She came to a stand at the base of an oak tree. Her arms were uplifted to the sky as she worshiped the Almighty God. She confessed the one sin she had and prayed for his divine help to relieve her of the child which she carried inside. Descending to her knees, she picked up a sharp-pointed stone and drove it through her own beating heart. Lying on the ground she bled to death from the wound

Janet Smith

I realize my lifelong journey Has only just begun.

I've been searching and searching My whole life long,

When I think I've found the answer,

I find I'm always wrong.

I lie awake for hours, Just waiting for the sun,

I guess I have to look for years and years

Give me the key to this jammed up door.

To come,

Then;

Until my journey's over and Completely done.

And on that day, I'll know the Real me,

But yet, so many others, Will still be searching For the key.

Laurie Johnson

What is left when a friend is gone? Trickling memories of a laugh or a smile? Fading shadows of a grasping hand? Or is it hopes of a new laugh or smile?
Or is it another "friend's" grasping hand at your throat?
And laughter turns to snickering then sorrow. Paul Berardi

In his mouldy blanket he lies, quiet, unmoving,

He is the millions who carry empty containers, who quietly lie down and never wake

Sores and boils and a bloated stomach are all that are on his skeleton, his teeth are rotted in his head

Wrapped in his mouldy blanket he lies, he is the millions, the starving, the dead.

This is Progress and Progress is Good

I walked into the dark ancient kitchen. She was standing there pouring hot water in her soup pot. Always the soup. She had had a sore throat recently and she always said that the only thing for a sore throat was her hot soup.

She kept the house up very well for a woman of her age. It was slightly gloomy, but a very nice antiquish sort of home. One thing that stands out in my mind is the delicate handlaced tablecloth that had yellowed with age. There were so many old and interesting things in her little sanctuary.

Everyone called her Aunt Ellie. I would visit her quite often and she would tell me about when she was my age. She was always a very stubborn and determined person, and just about always got her way. But now her life was slowly closing its just cracked open door. All she had ever had and wanted was her house and its contents. Not too much to ask in this forever changing, ratrace world.

I can see her now, on that last day, with that familiar stubborn look on her face. She would not move out of her house. Just who did these strangers think they were? This was her house and she was not going to leave and that was that!

The following week she was placed in a sunny sandbox to play until the clouds covered the sun and the rain came.

Now, going through Aunt Ellie's living room, over the old, beautiful Oriental rug and through the delicately carved fireplace is brand new sparkling U.S. Highway No. 84.

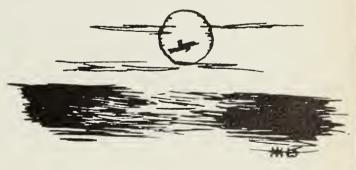

But this is progress and progress is good!

Laurie Johnson

The wind echoes thoughts of happiness, Times of joy, silence and stillness. I listen carefully for the traces, and grow lost. When shadows draw faces

I hear but cannot understand, Why the echoes sift through sand. I wait in the shadows, for I know that's where you'll be, Under the tree of tranquility.

Amy Kindler

Dawn comes to the earth Giving life to the sleeping And death to darkness Janance Malanson

As Zeus and Pluto were brothers, and one took Heaven, and one took Hell, so shall you and I go our separate ways. And when we die, and our souls go forth, perhaps they shall meet for one brief moment in eternity, and pass away again, until God shall judge his children. Karen Themistocles 41

And as we plod along our road, Physically, some begin to grow weary, For the trail is long And there are many hills and few declines.

But to offset those who lag behind, There are those to whom the length, Steepness, and sometimes brutal seasonal elements Are but a way of life . . . a challenge.

Accordingly, these people surge ahead
Leaving the energetic, but not so fit behind,
But within watching distance
And they can only but be moved to admire the physical achievements of their peers.

REINCARNATION—A WILD HORSE

I am a wild horse.

Once a million strong, thriving on grassy plains, now I am but few.

I compete with livestock, I am tasty to a dog. I have been shot for both.

I have been made man's servant.

Even the grassy plains, my substance, my savior, the object of my fleet-footed retreat, are almost gone.

But I survive.

I am a wild horse. I am awe-inspiring.

I am a wild horse.

I am a minority, I am spirited.

Forever running, snorting, frothing—my mane flying, my nostrils distended—I am caught up in my reckless flight.

My food is scarce; my life a struggle, a never-ending battle with a frigid world ignorant of struggle, confident of living.

But I refuse to submit.

I am a wild horse. I am proud.

I am a wild horse.

I am losing the battle, my numbers grow smaller, I stand alone. My hide is wrinkled, my mane is scraggly, my eyes are clogged with dust, I bear the marks of my fight.

Inside I grow tougher; my purpose is clearer, no man as yet owns me.

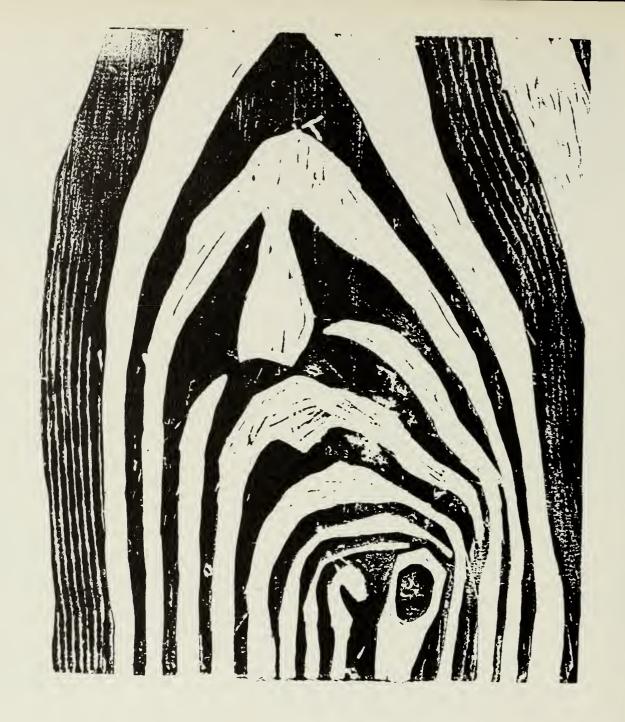

I live my life. I love my life.

I have fought for everything, I will have it no other way.

For I am still free.

I am a wild horse. My will is my own.

Mark Greenberg '72

It feels good to sweat over a patch of dirt. To pull up the dead plants and shake off the clinging loam and turn the soil under with a hoe and bent back. Take out the weeds and rake the dirt smooth. Then space and place in mind how the bulbs will be planted. It's good to have dirt on your hands and scratches from the rose bushes and sweat from your toil. You know there'll be part of yourself growing, next spring, in the soil.

STEVE RYAN '72

Outstretched hands begging— Pleading eyes and dying hearts Answered by hunger.

> Aged, old faces plead—More Wrinkled, outstretched hands beg-More Death will soon take more.

Hunger has long past. Starvation is now leaving.

Death will be welcomed. MICHELLE FOISY '72

A drop of dew drizzled down the slender stem of a daisy situated singly among a field of swaying grass. The sun excited this drop and it radiated proudly. Descending the stem the drop encountered a leaf and transformed into a pool, resting upon this outstretched hand. The daisy's head drooped and the drop fell to the ground to nurture the deceased's children.

PETER GODDARD '72

ONE SIDE OF A DUEL

He fixed his eyes with terror on the lean dead-like tree and began to walk.

His legs feeling like pliable branches wavered in the wind.

First his pace was steady with vibrations.

His eyes, becoming glassy, because of his ceaseless, deep stare, never left the smooth black texture of the tree.

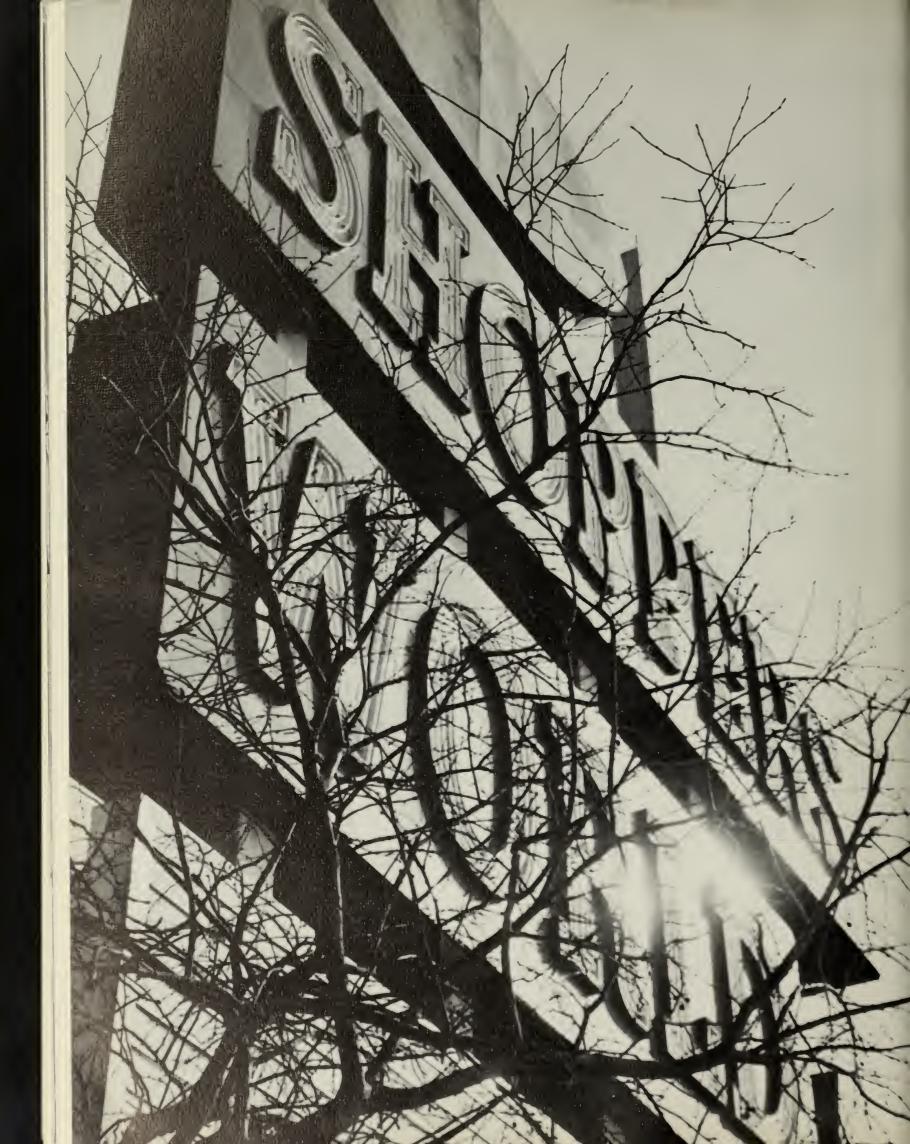

Then, his uncontrollable legs melted into the ground.

Adamantly, he regained his vertical position and continued on.

Behind him, the constant resonance of determined boots echoed in his ears.

Replete with fear
he made a demi-tour
and crumbled to the ground.
ELLEN BROWN '72

In conforming
We chose the proverbial path.
Yes, quite old and worn,
But gaining treachery with age.

Each year a few more
Brittle footholds crumble,
And bared rocks
Remind us that Nature still commands.

But as natural conditions worsen, Our own techniques are improved Along with the strengthening of our skill, And we look ahead.

Ahead . . .

To the end of the path, beyond the trees, Where a great field lies And each individual comes unto himself. Verse by Jean Crimmins

Congratulations to the Class of 1972

We know the sigh of relief that comes at the end of your final exam. Long years of study behind you, and a big wide world ahead.

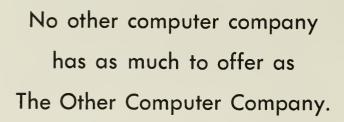

But even at that it isn't the final test—or the end of your learning. The biggest tests still face you in the choice and fulfillment of your life's work. Many plan for college, some must reckon with the armed forces. Others will seek positions in industry, trade, business. We, at Dennison, congratulate you on your past accomplishments; if your future plans call for steady employment or summer work, we'll be glad to discuss your problems with you.

Our Employment Department will welcome the chance to outline opportunities existing in our offices, factory, and warehouse.

You're about to take a giant step forward into your future. He think we can make it the bright one your want it to be at new England Nelephone. With a fot that's every bit as hip as your ambition. You see, we need people. Tich all kinds of talents. And especially, people who really want to get going with their future and want to be rewarded with automatic raises. Your High School siploma is all the experience your need. If you want a fot and a future that's tailored to your talent... along with unusually generous fringe benefits, stop in and see your guidance counseld. ask when and where you can apply for an interview with the people who want to make your future as happy as you want it to be.

My mind is clearer now.
At last all too well I can see where we all soon will be.
If you strip away the myth from the man,
You will see where we all soon will be.
